The general objective of the report

[The introductory paragraph is set in a corrupted font in the source PDF and is only partly legible. Its legible content indicates that the report aims to present the principal achievements of the National Centre for Human Rights during 2014 in the fields of monitoring the human rights situation in the Kingdom and the receipt and handling of complaints, research and studies, the dissemination of a human rights culture through training courses, seminars, workshops and lectures, the Centre's publications and press statements, the implementation of projects, and cooperation and coordination with national, regional and international bodies and with civil society institutions, with a view to the protection and promotion of human rights in the Kingdom.]

First: In the field of the promotion and protection of human rights

In the field of verifying observance of human rights in the Kingdom and of redressing any abuses or violations thereof, (386) complaints and (149) requests for assistance were received, in addition to the handling of dozens of enquiries and requests for legal advice. The violations concerned varied in nature and covered the various rights and the various governorates: civil and political rights, economic and social rights, and the rights of the groups most vulnerable to violation.

Second: In the field of field monitoring

Within the framework of verifying, redressing and remedying violations, and as part of the monitoring tasks entrusted to the Centre and guaranteed by Articles (7/8) of the Law of the Centre, the following violations were monitored:

- Monitoring of the elections of the Jordan Teachers Association on 25/3/2014. The most prominent observations were: failure to comply with the electoral campaigning instructions, including the Association's own instructions, and with the international standards governing electoral campaigning by certain candidates in a number of polling centres, campaigning having manifestly continued, in particular through the presence of large banners on the walls and gates of schools and on the interior buildings in which polling took place in support of certain candidates; the mobilisation of school pupils generally, and their direction, supervision and at times accompaniment by school teachers (from both governmental and private schools) to engage in such campaigning, and the exploitation of pupils and teachers for the purpose of promoting candidates, notwithstanding the absence of any declared official holiday, given that the Minister of Education had directed the educational community to attend the polling stations in order to vote and to return to their places of work as usual; and a manifest contravention, in a number of polling centres, of the standards of secrecy of the polling booths, in that those centres were not screened so as to prevent the committee and the delegates from observing the voting process, which affects the freedom of the voter.
- Observation of the elections of the Student Union of the University of Jordan on 27/3/2014. The most prominent observations were: the absence of any unified mechanism as to the location and form of the polling booth, and a manifest contravention of the standards of secrecy of the polling booths, in that they were not screened so as to prevent their contents from being seen by the electoral committee and the delegates during the voting process, which affects the freedom of the voter. There were tribal gatherings in support of certain candidates of the tribes, which created a state of pressure and a form of intimidation and thereby prevented some students from entering the polling centres in order to vote, in particular female students and voters of the Islamic current. Acts of violence occurred which resulted in injuries among students — candidates, voters and supporters — university professors and university security staff, and in the breaking of glass and other damage, and sound bombs were used; this also led to the suspension of voting at the Faculty of Arts beyond its official time by approximately one hour, while the electoral campaigning was characterised by a tribal and regional dimension through chants, printed propaganda and other practices suggestive of defiance, which created an inappropriate atmosphere. The responsible authorities and the university security did not take decisive measures sufficient to address these practices, which affected the proper conduct of the elections.

- Monitoring of the elections of the clubs of the Hashemite University on 27/2/2014, in the course of which no substantive irregularities affecting the integrity and soundness of the electoral process were observed or monitored, although there were certain observations relating to organisational procedures, and the electoral administration facilitated the team in the performance of its task.
- Fact-finding to ascertain the violations relating to the Arab City for the Comprehensive Care of Persons with Disabilities.
- Monitoring of violations of women's rights in the various regions of the Kingdom; (49) villages in remote areas were visited, as set out in the following table:

Projects implemented by the Centre during 2014

First: Implementation of the project for the promotion of electoral reform — parliamentary and municipal elections, in partnership with Ruwwad Al-Mustaqbal (Pioneers of the Future) for the Empowerment of Communities and with funding from the European Union

The general objective of the project is to support the electoral process (parliamentary or municipal) by raising the awareness and building the capacities of the public generally, and of women, young people, persons with special needs and marginalised groups and their institutions in particular, in relation to the electoral process and democratic reform, their rights and their political responsibilities and the importance of civic participation, with a view to restoring confidence between the citizen and the Government and increasing electoral participation.

- The third phase of the project for the promotion of electoral reform for the parliamentary and municipal elections was implemented as from the beginning of February; it comprises the holding of awareness workshops in a number of governmental schools situated in the least advantaged areas in the various governorates of the Kingdom. These workshops target secondary-stage school pupils, in their capacity as the builders of the future, with a view to preparing and qualifying them to enter civil and political life and to enabling them to exercise their right to vote and to stand for election, and highlighting the importance of their role as young people entitled to participate publicly in expression and reform.
- The workshops included a theatrical performance in cooperation with the Art for Human Rights team / Amnesty International. The general objective of the play is to demonstrate the role of the parliamentary student council and its role in presenting the problems of students, and to highlight the necessity of instilling a culture of awareness in the citizen in choosing the most competent candidate, whether a man or a woman, and of studying the candidate's electoral programme, which must fall within the tasks and powers of the candidate and serve the community.
